

This list aims to cover the whole of the traditional electric and steam tramway systems in the London area. Horse tramways NOT included. In common with most UK traditional tram systems, lists of stopping places were not published, and most stops were un-named, unless they were either fare stages or shown in public timetables. Thus, generally only fare stages and stops shown in public timetables are included in this list. LPTB did issue leaflets for at least two routes showing all stopping places following relocation of many stops due to increasing road traffic, route 27 in 1935 and route 67 in 1936 and are included in this list.

£ or no symbol: fare stage name in the 1911 Official Tramways Guide, later fare tables or on tickets; # from histories; t: name in public timetables. + selected other main stops (e.g. at railway stations, loops (L) on single track lines). %: routes shown in more detail with locations of all stops in list "London Transport Tramways 1950" (SL 15). Since preparation of SL 15, several un-named stops have been found to be fare stages at an earlier date (some with a different name to that I had assumed) and are included below. NOTE: SL 15, being one of my original "Amstrad" lists, has not been updated and should be cross-checked with this list, SL 184. Former names: [];

i.d: stop only in this direction; o.d: stop only in other direction; FS: fare stage; tm: terminus; u/d: undated

Route numbers shown below are generally as at October 1934 (Kingston area as 1930). Some rush hour and weekend only routes and route extensions are not included. To avoid duplication of route numbers following establishment of the London Passenger Transport Board (LPTB) in 1933, some routes were renumbered. The previous number, with pre-LPTB operator, are shown thus [xxx 5] (some routes were un-numbered). However, some duplicated route numbers remained, where located in different areas. London Transport Tramways 1933-1952 by Oakley & Holland, includes the 1934 route map and is strongly recommended.
