BIRMINGHAM & BESSEMER STEAM DUMMY RRs

Prior to establishment of the electric street railway system, the Birmingham-Bessemer area was served by a number of steam "dummy" railroads. These lines had many features of conventional steam railroads with steam locomotives hauling one or more cars (often second-hand main line cars) mainly operating on private rights of way with intermediate named flag stops. Contemporary timetables describe them as "trains" not street railways. The lines later became part of the electric street railway network with most of the prw's becoming public streets. For more information and maps, Street Railways of Birmingham by Hudson & Cox is highly recommended.
